

Structures that Support Strong Reading Workshops: Planning for Effective Mini Lessons, Conferences, and Small Group Instruction

A strong reading workshop is built upon a foundation of solid instruction. But what do teachers need to know in order to provide solid instruction? Does solid instruction look the same for the whole class as it does for small groups or one-on-one teaching situations?

Structures that Support Strong Reading Workshops: Planning for Effective Mini Lessons, Conferences, and Small Group Instruction will take an in-depth look at the structures that support great instruction in the reading workshop. During this hands-on learning experience, teachers will learn to evaluate and critique mini lessons in a way that will optimize instructional value. It will take a close look at the kind of support offered during small group instruction and conferences and offer tips and strategies to support teachers in their endeavors to make these structures more effective.

Teachers will receive a multitude of lesson ideas to take back to their classroom to support whole class, small group, and one-on-one instruction.
