

Strong Beginnings for Our Youngest Writers: Planning Great Writing Instruction in the Primary Classroom

What does writing workshop look like in the primary classroom? What do our youngest writers need in order to build a solid foundation for future writing success? How can we raise the bar of expectation when children are just beginning to develop the skills necessary for composing text?

These questions and others will guide our exploration in Strong Beginnings for Our Youngest Writers: Planning Great Writing Instruction in the Primary Classroom. This hands-on workshop is designed to provide teachers with the information they need to establish the writing workshop as an effective teaching structure in their primary classrooms.

Kim Yaris is a regional literacy consultant working with Long Island school districts to implement staff development initiatives in reading and writing instruction. Kim works daily alongside teachers demonstrating lessons, coaching for more effective teaching, mapping curriculum for the school year, and providing thoughtful training seminars in reading and writing workshops. She has sixteen years experience in education, including seven years as an elementary classroom teacher. Kim presents regularly at local conferences and literacy workshops.
